

Spotlight on researchers

What do the people working in research here on the Cambridge Biomedical Campus do from day to day? Why is their role important to the development of new treatments and medicines? And what does taking part in research really mean?

Find out some of their stories below...